English Language Stack Exchange It is possible to run OS X's Disk Utility from a FAT32 volume. How do you install a driver from a USB Stick? Do you have to do anything with the stick or the installation? Usb Xtaf Gui Version 31 16 Could someone please tell me where to find and how to install the Java Control Panel on a USB Device? A: It doesn't look like Apple's Disk Utility can do that, but you can install the Java Control Panel from the Java Web Start installer package. Don't panic, Disk Utility's Get Info dialog lets you select a USB drive for each type. If you select the USB disk name, it should be a path like /dev/disk2s1; (Here it's showing the free space with my name in it) But as Lekensteyn points out, this is a path related to an internal disk. You can fix that with Disk Utility's Repair Disk button. If you selected a disk path with the Name field, rather than the Drive field, it would look like /Volumes/MyDisk; But again, this is only good for internal disks. To use the Web Start installer package to install Java on a USB drive, you would just put the JAR file on the drive with an iTunes installation. In Windows, you can do so by copying the JavaControlPanel.jar file to the root of the USB drive, and then using the USB Drive plugin on OS X. Q: What is wrong with this vim? As you see there is more white space. Can't make sense out of this. A: This is a problem with your terminal emulator. The extra characters are from the editing state of the last line (the two lines above the insert here) which the cursor is pointing to. Your terminal emulator (if it's set to 8 chars width) will autoredraw the insert here line while you're editing the previous line. If
